

Introduction: A Deep Dive into the Fair Credit Reporting Act

April 21, 2021

The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) impacts every aspect of a U.S. consumer's life. Consumer reports are obtained by lenders, employers, landlords, and even utility companies, impacting the cost of credit and everyday services, as well as the ability to obtain employment or access housing.

Over the next 14 weeks, McGlinchey is pleased to present a deep dive into all things FCRA from attorneys across the firm's geographic and service area footprint. From articles on hot FCRA topics to a webinar to a client-only, live Q&A session, content will be geared towards busy schedules and drilled down right to the good stuff – how does the FCRA impact your business and what should you be thinking about?

The FCRA is the subject of regular litigation as well as regulatory enforcement action and thus deserves particular attention. If your business currently obtains consumer reports or plans to obtain consumer reports as part of a new venture, this programming is designed for you.

Hear more from Aaron Kouhopt (Cleveland) on what to expect over the next 14 weeks, as well as an overview of McGlinchey's FCRA experience and current trends from litigator Gregg Stevens (Dallas) and regulatory and compliance attorney David Thompson (Cleveland).
